Broadly, "resilience" is defined as a system's ability to adapt to and recover from a shock or disruption.

However, the true meaning of "resiliency" is dependent on the subject or the system being discussed. It could be represented by the ability of an ecosystem to recover after a wildfire, a small business bouncing back after a financial loss, or a family enduring a sudden medical emergency.

SRPEDD is taking the Regional Resilience Plan on a regional tour, looking to identify and implement projects that address your community's goals while also contributing to increased resilience across Southeastern Massachusetts.

Does your community have a project you'd like implemented?
